Religious Services for the People.

Notice has already been given that the special religious services will be held at the Congregational church at least two weeks beginning Sunday morning, Sept. 7, at the time of regular service. All means everywhere and all the people (this religious belief or matter what their community are cordially invited to attend and do and get all the good possible.

Vacation and the long, hot, exhausting summer have caused many people to drop all religious work and many in all the churches have for various causes neglected to attend church for many weeks. The cool weather has now come and we appeal to all the people to again take up their regular practice of church attendance.

Something out of the ordinary is helpful to break up the habit of indifference and the spirit of indifference toward religious religion. Rev. C. L. Everts of Boston, who is here on his annual tour, has engaged to assist special services for a short time. Every Sabbath morning the name will even be for the success of these meetings. Not only will they wish but will pray and work.

The Rev. Mr. Everts, "He compels conviction and then appeals to all the noble and many within the soul. The absence of all sensation and the appeal to the will rather than to the emotions thus renders such services of value to those who are indifferent to religion."

The interest and enthusiasm of the people from the first will give encouragement to the special worker and carry the work of the mission on to a vastly higher plane than though he were struggling to spend half his time and strength to reach the sleepy Christians. Mr. Everts greatly desires the assistance of the singers and it is hoped large number will be willing to aid the work in this delightful manner.

All the singers of the community regardless of church, are earnestly invited to sing at the special services. The evenings as far forth as possible to come into the chorus. The amount of food the individual church in the community gets out of the meetings will depend on the amount of heart and work.

It is expected that each church will hold its own regular service Sunday morning. At 3.30 p. m. all are invited to meet at the Congregational for a brief service to meet Rev. Mr. Everts, listen to music and hear some words from him at an outline of the service to be held at 8 o'clock Sunday evening, a general assembly meeting will be held to which all are invited. The singing books for the choruses have come and all who will assist in the work of the chorus are invited to bring them to the church. This is on Friday afternoon at 9 o'clock, a half hour before the service.

The Steeple Climbers.

The sidewalk was roped off in front of the Norway House entrance Tuesday morning, and the danger to pedestrians out of harms' way. The block tower was being repaired by an expert. Some of the bricks had become loosened and were in danger of falling at the top of the tower. The high chimney at the shore factory may have been blown over the top rail. Fred L. Haynes of the Star-Steeples Co., Worcester, Mass., the man in charge and James Hewes the helper.

Mr. Haynes was formerly in business with Worcester, but about 30 years ago through a man who was working for him it was made to see the possibilities in repairing steeples and high buildings without the expense and time of building new. He sold out his business, and founded this new one in which he has almost a monopoly. He now has 30 men working for him in different places. He owns three-fourths of the Star-Steeples Company and his wife the remainder. It might be called a family affair. They have worked in nearly every town and city from Labrador to Florida and in the 20 years have met with only two accidents. A man was killed by a fall in Gorham, this State, and another in Worcester had his arm injured.

Mr. Haynes tells of an incident of a level steeple in Worcester, when President Roosevelt visited that city. There were two high church steeples, a Swedish one and a French one. The French one lay near together with only a low building between them. He stationed a man at the apex of each steeple, one with the Swedish and American flag and the other with the French and American flag. When these were men with the flags and strippers and were fired off on the sides of each steeple with guns, and from steeple to steeple over the low roof was the name of the Star-Steeples Co. When the President passed the men dipped the flags in salute. Mr. Haynes was satisfied with the result.

After the President, thanking him for the novelty of his greeting. He has on other times given noted personages the same sort of high places.

After a recent visit up our lake Pennesaukee Wednesday a friend in a motor boat. They expected to find a hotel there where they could get supper, but there are none there, naturally they did not find one. They got to the village and found the dining room of their hotel closed. The hotel shows he did not starve, for he happens to tell the tale. He is so pleased with our little lake that he and his wife propose to come here next summer and make addition to our lake's pleasant shores. Mr. Haynes is now on his way to join his husband here.

The directors of the Norway Building Association are to have the yane on the tower taken down and regilded, the tin dome painted and brickwork of tower below the brick rest on covering building.

New Hall Not to Be Closed.

A. E. Shurtzess, president of the I. O. O. F. hall, says that he was not aware there was an hall, and closing New Hall or that the stockholders were dissatisfied with the return coming from the block, and there was no likelihood of the village being without a public hall.

Geraldine Farrar.

The papers are saying:—"Why shoot the States of Maine produce nearly the great singing talent of the country?" Louise Cary, Lillian Nordica and Emma Eames are three of them, and now it is feared that the young American soprano of whom all Europe is at present talking is also of Maine. Geraldine Farrar was also born in Maine at South Paris. This is not strictly true. Geraldine Farrar, the new prima donna, was born in Melrose, Mass., but her grandfather, Sidney Farrar, lived on Paris Hill at South Paris, and she was born there. When a young girl, she was sent to Philadelphia and became a professional base ball player. She covered first base on the Boston and Philadelphia teams of the national league.

It is understood that Geraldine Farrar will return to this country where she will visit her relatives in Oxford county. She has a aunt, Mrs. G. W. Heath, in Summer and cousins, Timothy Lunt in Buckfield and George and Harrison Farrar in South Paris and Dover, N. H. way. She inherits her musical temperament from her mother, who was a teacher of the violin and who played the instrument in the theaters. Her father figures in the musical world as her daughter's manager.

Geraldine Farrar is a magic name across the Atlantic. No American girl has ever had Europe so completely enthralled. Kings have honored her, princes have signed her, and she has extolled her, and American tourists abroad for the past two seasons have traveled miles out of their way to hear her.

Yet it was hardly more than yesterday that she went to Paris to study? A poor, unknown little lass in her teens. She was in short skirts, with chubby cheeks, tomboy ways, and her hair down her back. And now, behold, she comes triumphantly with a host of admirers, making her debut here in grand opera, having a twenty-four amazed Europe with her acting and her voice, and having been heralded as the coming prima donna of the century.

With a wonderful voice, her only fortune, she has mounted rapidly the ladder of fame, until to-day no name fits her so well as that of "the new Patti." Brilliance, beauty, romance, and astounding success have marked her young career.

Those who envy Miss Farrar her success, who say she's been lucky, and who think of her only in the light of her present triumphs, should have known how during those years of study in Paris she was doing the hard, critic hat, the grind of study that hundreds of other American girls were doing. You may be sure there was no pretty picture of France about it then. And some days their training was not so pleasant. There were discouragements, failures and troubles a-plenty, and many a time it looked as if tickets would have to be bought for home. But they fought it out. Geraldine and her father and mother, in the difficult regime of study and the lessons taught by failure, together with the girl's splendid American gift began to tell at last. She was shortly making a name for herself in the opera house, and on its lips and then came the offer from the Royal Opera at Berlin—and success.

During the last two years that Miss Farrar has sung throughout Europe her endurance has been tested as never before. During those years she has had the strain of an almost all-the-time singing. She has been decorated by King Oscar honored by the German Emperor, courted by the Crown Prince, member of the Royal Opera company at twenty-one, and will make her American debut this winter.

The girl is sometimes accompanied en tour by both her parents, but always by her mother, whose attendance is of much importance to the singer.

The Canton Fair.

The Canton fair this week has had fair skies the first two days and a successful exhibit. The third day Canton Probate refused to take a hand. The Canton and Mexico Granges have cleverly arranged departments. The garden vegetables, fruit and field crops show a good growth. Not a better collection at any fair in the State. There is a fine lot of sick looking cattle, and to a good majority of the people it's one of the most interesting features. Fairs were every where.

The Bride 65 Years Old; the Groom 80.
In Buckfield, Sept. 15, Rev. A. W. Pottle officiating, occurred the marriage of James F. Bicknell and Mrs. Emily E. Turner, both of Buckfield. The groom is 80 years old and the bride is 65 years. They start out in their new life with the best wishes of their hosts of friends.

Burglars gained an entrance to the Bridgton post-office early Wednesday morning last week, and made way with about $245 and some odd cents, $43 of the haul being cash and the rest in stamps. The break was not discovered until about four o'clock Wednesday morning, when Postmaster Davis came down to make up the early morning mail. The burglars had a start of about two hours. One was killed by falling from a freight train that he had boarded near Bartlett, N. H., and died from the injuries. He has been identified as John L. Sullivan of Lawrence, Mass., who had a criminal record.

September Farm Work.

September is the month most chosen for sowing grass seed without grain, and the month best adapted to a good crop. There is no better way of improving the corn crop than to go through the field before any of the corn is ripe and mark the earliest and best ears by tying a bit of string around them that they may be saved for seed when husking. If the best ears from stalks that bear two ears are saved, it increases the tendency to produce two or more ears on a stalk.

I have little doubt that the yield of our corn crop could be greatly increased if the seed was selected and while digging by taking it only from the best ears, regardless of size excepting to get such as were fully ripe. Seed from pumpkins, squashes, melons, corn, and tomatoes should be saved from perfect specimens grown in proper soil, and from them only. The seed beans and peas from rows that ripen earliest on rows planted only for seed purposes.

Every farmer comes the query from some section: Is it best to dig down? If they are beginning to rot will they not rot after they are dug as badly as they would in the ground? My experience indicates that potatoes dug before the vines are thoroughly dead which is usually within a week after the leaves drop off, and that in those in which rot has started it may be the sun, and not long enough to turn them green, which would not be worth the trouble of digging and drying them in a cool but dry cellar or other place. It is said by those who know that potatoes planted in the ground in November will rot.

I would not topdress grass-land with barn-yard manure in September if I had a lot of land and an abundance of manure. But it would pay to pile up the manure in the yards, barn cellars, pigpens and manure pits, and use it as a ferment, working it over as soon as the smell of escaping ammonia indicated fermentation and covering it with soil or a light land plaster to absorb the ammonia and by repeating this process getting it all the more to spread upon the grass land late in October or early in November.

While the manure spreader is of great value in finishing up the lump and scattering manure evenly, there is an advantage in having the manure so rotten and well received about the each square yard of fertilizing elements as any other square yard. This forking over at short intervals, mixing and making fine bed some labor, but the main object of the farmer is to obtain the best possible rest for his land and pay for his labor, and sometimes this may come from putting both land and labor to use that do not require immediate payment, but pay in future results.

One may find spots in the fields of grass that have been killed. Such spots may be a foot square, or a half-acre in extent, yet one does not like to plow up the entire good grass-field to re-seed them. I have used a steel-toothed rake on such places and taken off the loose roots and weeds; then scattered a little fine rotted manure or good commercial fertilizer on them and sowing grass seed as if in new plowed land, raked it in and the next season, instead of not being worth mowing, they were the heaviest grass plots in a very good field.

There seems not to be much to do in the outdoors excepting to harvest the early fruits and get them into market. The standard bushel box used in Boston markets is the best in New England for early apples and pears certainly, and it or its equivalent is rapidly coming in favor of the export trade.

Currents, gooseberries and raspberries need to have old moss removed from out of them and destroyed by fire, and cuttings may be taken for settings if one desires to increase the area devoted to such crops. Manuring them should not begin until November.

The care needed by the cows now is only to see that they have green food enough to prevent them from shrinking in milk or flesh. If there is a dry season to make good the failure in the pasture, a shrinkage now cannot be remedied by more bountiful feeding later on.

"The State of Maine must choose between hypocrisy and ruin," it is said. Well, if we must choose between two evils let us by all means choose the lesser.

The Rebuilding at Fryeburg.

Let us start then with the Hotel Oxford, where the fire originated. On this hotel was an insurance of $11,500. Its manager was Frank C. Plummer. It is understood that this insurance doesn't pay the holders of the mortgage on the property, and that the Plummer, after many years at Fryeburg has little left to show for his work there. It is probable that a new hotel will be built on the site of the Oxford. But it will not be so elaborate a structure as the hotel recently burned.

The millinery store occupied by Mrs. Mary B. Barker, next to the Hotel Oxford, will not be rebuilt, at least not by her, as she was thinking of going out of business before the fire.

The Pike house, which came next, will probably be rebuilt. This was owned by the heirs of Asa O. Pike, and include Hattie A. Pike, Mrs. Mary B. Barker and C. W. Pike.

built. This was the historic mansion, Isaac Abbott, the pioneer blacksmith of the town, erected the building. His descendants are among the best citizens of the village and some of them still work at the mill.

Tobias E. Eastman will rebuild provided that he can buy the next lot, that occupied by Mrs. Eben Weeks. The houses occupied by Mrs. Eastman and the Sprague house, and were reckoned as among the finest in the village.

The flames then destroyed the printing office of H. G. Freeman, and then grasped in their course the handsome house and stable of Seth W. Pife, and then the old Deacon Buzzell mansion, occupied by E. P. Weston, all on Main street.

On Portland street it burned the old Fryeburg house, the Minnie Bradley house, and the houses occupied by Andrew Evans and Daniel P. Walker.

From the questions put to the various owners of the burned buildings it seems certain that the Pikes, the Abbotts, the Eastmans and the Pifes will at once recon- if he can get at a price a part or a whole of the lot adjoining.

Minnie Walker will probably not rebuild, nor will Andrew Evans, or Nathaniel Walker, on Portland street.

Letter to V. W. Hills.

Norway, Maine.
Dear Sir: You know, diamonds don't go by size. So with paint.
We make paint, one gallon of which goes as far as two of another and lasts twice as long; that's four to one.
You know it is true in diamonds; they don't go by the gallon, do they?
If you're going to paint your house,
you go first to your painter and say:
"I'm going to paint; do you want the job? And what'll it cost?"
If he happens to know, he'll say:
"Depends on the paint. I can do it for somewhere about $100 or $200, whichever you like; $100 a good job; $200 a poor
one."
And you, if you happen to have your wife, "I'll take the good one,
when'll you do it?"
Painters ought, all, to know about paints and jewelers ought to be able to get a good job. We do what we can to help both.
One gallon Devco is better than two of average paint, goes as far—that is,
your house will take about 20 gallons
Devco and 40 of average paint—and Devco will wear a long time; the life of average paint is very uncertain, it may be a year, it may be five.
Why is it that painters don't know about paint? Do jewelers know about diamonds? They know more than they tell sometimes. There are painters and painters; so there are jewelers; so there is paint, and the last-gallon paint is Devco.
Yours truly,
F. W. DEVCO & Co.,
F. P. Stone, Norway, and W. S. Jackson & Son, West Paris, sell our paint.

Tired, Nervous Mothers

Make Unhappy Homes—Their Condition Irritates Both Husband and Children—How Thousands of Mothers Have Been Saved From Nervous Prostration and Made Strong and Well.

A nervous, irritable mother, often on the verge of hysterics, is unfit to care for children; it ruins a child's disposition and reacts upon herself. The trouble between children and their mothers too often is due to the fact that the mother has nervous female weakness, and she is entirely unfit to bear the strain upon her nerves that governing children involves; it is impossible for her to do anything calmly. The ills of women act like a firebrand upon the nerves, consequently nine-tenths of the nervous prostration, nervous despondency, "the blues," sleeplessness, and nervous irritability of women arise from some derangement of the female organism. Do you experience fits of depression with restlessness, alternating with extreme irritability? Are your spirits easily affected, so that one minute you laugh, and the next minute you feel like crying? Do you feel something like a ball rising in your throat and threatening to choke you; all the senses perverted, morbidly sensitive to light and sound; pain in the abdominal region, and between the shoulders; ceasing-down pains; nervous dyspepsia and almost continually cross and snappy? If so, your nerves are in a shattered condition, and you are threatened with nervous prostration. It is of monumental that nothing in the world is better for nervous prostration than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; thousands and thousands of women can testify to this fact. Ask Mrs. Pinkham's Advice—A Woman Best Understands a Woman's ills.

Mrs. Chester Curry, Leader of the Ladies' Symphony Orchestra, 42 Saratoga Street, East Boston, Mass., writes:
"For eight years I was troubled with extreme nervousness and hysteria, brought on by irregularities. I could neither enjoy life nor sleep nights; I was very irritable, nervous and despondent.
"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended and proved to be the only remedy that helped me. I have daily improved in health until I am now strong and well, and all nervousness has disappeared."
Mrs. Charles F. Brown, Vice-President of the Mothers' Club, 21 Cedar Terrace, Hot Springs, Ark., writes:
"I dragged through nine years of miserable existence, worn out with pain and nervousness, until it seemed as though I should fly. I then noticed a statement of a woman troubled as I was, and the wonderful results she derived from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I decided to try it. I did so and at the end of three months I was a different woman. My nervousness was all gone. I was no longer irritable, and my husband fell in love with me all over again."
Women should remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the medicine that holds the record for the greatest number of actual cures of female ills, and take no substitute.
Free Advice to Women.
Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write to her for the advice. Mrs. Pinkham's vast experience with female troubles enables her to advise women wisely, and she will charge you nothing for her advice.
